Syllabus
Content knowledge	The course in law and religion is aimed at learning about the relationship between law and religion, particularly the understanding of the influence of religion on legal systems, both as a fideistic and anthropological phenomenon. In particular, the course will focus on cross-cultural methodology for studying the problems posed by multireligiousness and multiculturalism. The themes of the course will focus on the analysis of the principles of religious freedom, religious equality and secularism in its first part. The second part will be devoted to the study of some classic institutions of ecclesiastical law: marriage and ecclesiastical bodies and in general the patrimonial aspects related to the religious phenomenon
